Remaking the Marvelous City

Rio de Janeiro hopes to take back former glory with 2016 Olympics

Rio de Janeiro residents celebrate Friday as their city is announced as the winner to host the 2016 Olympic Games. AP

Associated Press

Brazil's most iconic city has been losing its luster for decades, and those who live there hope that the 2016 Olympic Games will help it regain lost glory.

While its gorgeous beaches have kept Rio De Janeiro among the world's top tourist draws, and the city hosts major events like the annual Carnival and the 2007 Pan American Games without incident, its international reputation for violence has weighed it down, and its domestic role as the epicenter of all things Brazilian has waned.

"Rio is a city that has suffered," President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva said in Copenhagen, after the city won the Olympics on Friday. "Rio, for a long time, has appeared in newspapers in the crime section."

Rio's modern decline came quickly after its cultural apex in the late 1950s, when its cool Bossa Nova beat circled the globe, backing its self-titled nickname of the Marvelous City.

The first big blow came in 1960, when Brazil's capital was moved inland to Brasilia, taking political power away from Rio for the first time since 1763. The 1960s also saw rival city Sao Paulo's industrial sector surge, making it a modern economic powerhouse and luring countless businesses—and cash—away from the coast.

The 1970s and '80s saw drug gangs violently take control of Rio's vast slums, with the lucrative cocaine trade fueling violence that engulfs the city to this day, generating those sordid newspaper headlines. Some 2 million of Rio's residents live in slums, where government presence is essentially nonexistent and the rule of law is whatever the drug lord demands.

But some residents are hoping that the Olympics—and the massive $14.4 billion plan that Rio presented—mean improvements will come quickly.

"This will force the authorities to improve security and other social problems. How can we receive the entire world if these problems endure?" said Rita Villa-Forte, a 60-year-old lawyer from Rio's beachside Ipanema neighborhood.

"It is a beautiful city, yet things have not always gone well for it."

Baby-snatching case takes a turn

Yair Carillo

Associated Press

A newborn boy abducted by a woman posing as an immigration agent was again taken from his mother after a brief reunion, this time by state officials who said the baby and his three siblings would be safest with foster parents.

Rob Johnson, a spokesman for the Tennessee Department of Children's Services, said the children were taken from their mother, Maria Gurrolla, "purely for safety reasons," though he would not detail why they were in danger.

Johnson said officials made arrangements for Gurrolla to see her baby Saturday afternoon and hold him, four days after he was abducted. She brought her three other children—ages 3, 9 and 11—to the reunion and all of the children were then taken into custody. Johnson, who said he could not discuss details of the situation for privacy reasons, said a judge would review the case next week to determine when the children can go home.

Joel Siskovic, an FBI special agent in the Memphis division, said there was no indication of an ongoing threat to the family. He could not say why the children were put into state custody.

Gurrolla, 30, was stabbed in her home Tuesday during the kidnapping, just four days after giving birth to Yair Anthony Carillo.

Nashville police said the baby was found in good health Friday night at a home in Ardmore, Ala., about 80 miles south of Nashville near the Tennessee line.

Tennessee Bureau of Investigation Director Mark Gwyn said officials arrested Tammy Renee Silas, 39, at the home in Ardmore. Federal authorities formally charged her Saturday with kidnapping.

Silas' live-in boyfriend, Martin Rodriguez, said he didn't think she was capable of the crime.

Speaking through an interpreter, he said Silas told him she was adopting a baby from a cousin who had to go to jail, and was going to El Paso, Texas, to get the child. He said Silas had a newborn with her when he picked her up from the Huntsville airport Tuesday.

Obamas keep wedding anniversary simple this year

Associated Press

There was no trip to New York and no fancy outing as the Obamas celebrated their first wedding anniversary since they moved to the White House.

Instead they kept it simple, with a dinner out Saturday night at an elegant, American-fare restaurant near Georgetown. The evening was balmy and the moon almost full.

President Barack Obama stayed in all day before taking a motorcade with Michelle

Last year, the Obamas also had an understated anniversary with a simple dinner out in downtown Chicago. The Obamas were married Oct. 3, 1992, in a ceremony at the Trinity United Church of Christ in Chicago.

The anniversary dinner came after a whirlwind week that saw the Obamas fly to Copenhagen to make an unsuccessful pitch for their hometown of Chicago to host the 2016 Olympics.

(Conan, since you won't respond to me on Twitter, let's be Wave buddies, OK?)

@xrayedman:
What would we Twitter friends do without each other besides lead normal lives?

Wave of the future?

Looking for a ticket to the season's hottest social media party? You'll have to wait in line—Google Wave is by invitation only.

The online communication and collaboration tool that makes real-time interactions more seamless and lets you communicate using richly formatted text, photos, videos, maps and more has been getting some serious buzz for the past few months. The buzz turned electric late last week after Google sent out 100,000 invitations to Wave's beta program.

So why is Google Wave being touted as the next Twitter or Facebook? The features take what we love about social media now and expands them with an almost live component.

If you are one of the lucky invitees, here's what you have to look forward to:

According to Google's Wave page, a wave is a conversation with multiple participants—participants are people added to a wave to discuss and collaborate on its content. Participants can reply any time and anywhere within a wave, and they can edit content and add more participants as a wave develops. It's also possible to rewind waves with the playback functionality, to see what happened, and when.

One thing is clear. Google has been paying attention to the shortcomings of Twitter and Facebook—neither stress the importance of collaboration and conversation. And neither makes it easy to see what you've missed if you join a conversation late. Google Wave can catch you up with the push of a button and it lets you add the people you want to add to your wave.

So how do you get an invite? If you didn't request one a few months back when Google opened its request list, you may be out of luck this time around. But the request an invite page is still up at tr.im/Apdh. And if you really can't wait, search eBay. Several auctions are still going on.

I'll be keeping you up to date on the progress of Google Wave over the coming months and hoping I receive my invite soon.

What about you? Have you tried Google Wave or do you have an invite? Tweet me, poke me—just tell me. And if you give me an invite, we can wave to each other.

THANK YOU

Just as competing in the Olympic and Paralympic Games brings untold rewards to the athletes, so too does competing to become Host City. While we may not have walked away with the gold, Chicago has won in many other ways.

Thousands of people across the city and the nation united behind Chicago 2016. And the world took notice. Unprecedented media attention has forever raised the city's profile as an international destination.

More than 300,000 Chicagoland youth benefitted from sport and educational activities as a direct result of the bid. And Chicago 2016's legacy organization, World Sport Chicago, will continue to reach local youth for years to come.

Thank you to all those who supported Chicago 2016 over the years. And thank you to the International Olympic Committee for giving us this opportunity to compete on the world stage.

HOW DO SOME YOUNG PROFESSIONALS GET AHEAD SO QUICKLY?

By Alexia Elejalde-Ruiz
REDEYE

Julie Smolyansky was 27 when she became a CEO. Her father died suddenly of a heart attack, leaving her to run the publicly traded yogurt company he'd founded 16 years before.

"The outside world didn't believe I could handle it," Smolyansky, now 34, recalls. "But failure was not an option."

For the next three years, Smolyansky said, she slept an average of three hours per night as she worked to save Morton Grove-based Lifeway Foods. It paid off.

Last year, the company's revenues were more than triple what they were when she took over, having risen from $12.2 million in 2002 to $44.5 million.

Smolyansky, who lives in Lincoln Park, credits her success to her instinctive knack for marketing, a dedicated staff, some strategic product initiatives—and most of all, a genuine belief in the product.

"You have to live it, love it," she said.

Every now and then, you come across a young person who seems to have sprinted up the career ladder. A 27-year-old CEO. A 26-year-old high school principal. A 28-year-old congressman.

For the masses toiling at more modest posts, such as a swift upward trajectory is met with a mix of awe and envy. How did he or she get there so quickly? What is it about this person's talent, work ethic, connections or luck that propelled him or her to such prestigious heights so early?

And what am I doing wrong?

While there's no magic formula, young Chicagoans in high places say good mentors, positive attitude, willingness to work every waking hour and humility are among the secrets to their success.

That's not exactly groundbreaking insight, but it bears repeating as job dissatisfaction rates sit at 35 percent, according to a survey published this year by salary.com, with Millennials reporting the most job dissatisfaction (65 percent).

Jeremy Ulmer, a Chicago career coach, said he gets a range of clients, from recent college graduates to CEOs, who are seeking support or looking for a sounding board in order to be more effective, attain higher leadership roles or get a lift out of the quicksand of their stagnant careers.

Sometimes, he said, it's hard for clients to answer the most important question of all: What is it that you really want?

"If you can find what you love to do, it doesn't even feel like work," said Ulmer, 32. "When you're that passionate about it, the likelihood of success is 10 times greater."

Talking to young Chicagoans with impressive career paths, passion is the common ingredient.

"It's about love," said Eboo Patel, 33, who recently was appointed to the Advisory Council of the White House Office of Faith-based and Neighborhood Partnerships. Patel founded the Interfaith Youth Core when he was 22 and continues to spend "every spare moment" working on the nonprofit, which brings together young people of different faiths for community service projects to highlight the goodness of religion.

Patel ran the organization with no budget for four years, working as a professor to make a living, before he got his first grants for the Youth Core, totaling $100,000. This year, he said, his budget is $4 million.

Of course, love isn't all you need. In Patel's case, a prestigious Rhodes scholarship and substantive knowledge of religion and foreign affairs helped win him supporters and funding because they allowed him to smartly and seriously convey his vision.

Mentors also are key.

Alexi Giannoulis said his decision to run for Illinois state treasurer at 29 was cemented after he worked on the U.S. Senate campaign of President Obama, an old basketball buddy of his.

"It was seeing his ability to inspire people and bring ideas to the table, and just the fact that an incredibly intelligent person could overcome the odds and become a U.S. senator," Giannoulis, now 33, said. Giannoulis announced this year that he is running for Obama's Senate seat.

Though some people at first expressed skepticism about his age, Giannoulis said, ultimately what voters cared about was what fresh ideas he could bring to the table.

"They're more interested in how you can make their lives easier and better," Giannoulis said.

Aaron Schock, a 28-year-old U.S. Republican congressman from Peoria, raised eyebrows when he made his first foray into politics at age 19. Dissatisfied with some of the decisions that the Peoria School Board was making, including a rule prohibiting students from graduating early, Schock campaigned to be a school board member.

He encountered resistance. Several board members successfully challenged his petition signatures in court and had him thrown off the ballot. In response, Schock knocked on all 13,000 doors in the district, campaigning as a write-in candidate, and won.

Schock said his age hasn't been much of an issue since then because, with eight years of experience under his belt, he's proven himself to be serious, hard-working and effective—though TMZ did make him famous for his six-pack abs when it posted a photo of him in his bathing suit, and GQ features a photo spread of Schock in its October issue.

He says it's important to stay humble. "If you're willing to stop and say, 'I don't have all the answers, what do you think of this,' you can get a lot of advice and save yourself some headaches," Schock said.

Janice K. Jackson knew she didn't have all the answers when, at 26, she was named principal of Al Raby, a small public high school she helped found on the West Side.

Originally intending to be a college history professor, Jackson was teaching at Chicago Public Schools while getting her master's degree when she grew disheartened by how the school was run, and, at 24, assembled a group to apply for a grant to found the new school.

Though some district administrators initially resisted her appointment as principal, saying she was too young and inexperienced, supporters impressed with her leadership during the grant process lobbied on her behalf, Jackson said.

"If you get complacent doing one thing, and one thing well, then you're not going to progress," said Jackson, 32, who lives in the South Loop and recently started a job as principal of the new Westinghouse High School, a hybrid of a selective enrollment college prep program and a college and careers program that at capacity will have 1,200 students.

Being young in a leadership role has its advantages: more energy, fresh ideas, an ease with technology, and, for those without a spouse and kids, the ability to commit long hours. But Jackson said there's also more pressure to do well.

"You have been given a lot," Jackson said, "but a lot is expected of you." AELEJALDERUIZ@TRIBUNE.COM

Bridge info goes online

Chicago Tribune

Ever since the 2007 collapse of an Interstate highway spanning the Mississippi River in Minneapolis, Illinois officials have kept quiet about the deteriorating condition of many bridges here, citing security concerns in an era of terrorist threats.

But newly released inspection data reveals details about what's specifically wrong with many of the state's deficient bridges, and thus what rehab work is required to keep them safe. Notably, part of the Congress Parkway bridge over the Chicago River received the lowest possible rating for a span allowed to remain in service.

Illinois Department of Transportation officials told the Tribune the overall number of bridges that get poor marks for upkeep has come down by a small margin in the past year, while there is more money available for repairs from federal stimulus and state sources.

Those overall tallies are updated annually. What's been kept quiet, until now, are the details.

Illinois officials blocked the public from accessing timely data about the specific condition of thousands of bridges in the state two years ago, after 13 people died and about 145 others were injured in Minneapolis when the Interstate Highway 35W bridge over the Mississippi collapsed on Aug. 1, 2007.

Now, for the first time, information summarizing inspection findings is available. It can be viewed online, at wrc.dot.il.gov/bridgeinformation.

With new funding flowing for infrastructure improvements, the state is playing catch-up by accelerating the bridge-repair schedule.

"We end up with a backlog of structures because some bridges are in the holding pen waiting to be repaired or replaced based on funding being made available," said Todd Ahrens, bridge planning engineer at IDOT. "Others will be needing work, but they aren't yet bad enough to be eligible for federal funding."

"But we will not leave an unsafe bridge open to traffic," he said.

Beating death has America talking, searching for a solution to senseless youth violence

Chicago Tribune

Days after 16-year-old Fenger High School student Derrion Albert was beaten to death, a photograph of a distraught young woman, weeping uncontrollably, was messaged to Jeremy Holmes' cell phone.

The portrait summed up all of Holmes' emotion about the brutal killing, he said.

"For some reason, this story has stuck out more than usual," said Holmes, 30, who works as a music instructor in south suburban Robbins and Posen. "After something like this happens, we do a march, we scream, shout, and then it happens again."

"People are at their wits' end with this violence and have no answers or solutions," he said.

Throughout America a discussion is taking place about the brutal killing of Albert, just what it means and what can be done.

In barbershops and salons on the West Side, at churches, rallies and prayer vigils on the South Side, at Metra train stops and on buses, at conferences and suburban coffee shops, even on Facebook and Twitter, African-Americans are asking questions like: What is happening to us? Why are our children killing each other? What has happened to the value of life?

And unlike violent acts against black children in the past, the reaction to Albert's death has been espe-

LOCAL MOURNING

Derrion Albert was laid to rest Saturday after a three-hour funeral attended by the well-known, those who knew him well and others who just wanted to pay their respects. Civil rights leader, the Rev. cially visceral because the beating was videotaped and broadcast online for all to watch.

"People can't help but talk about this because of how brutal it was. A group of adolescents were picking up objects and using their bodies as weapons. And numerous people stood around and watched," said Cymetra Williams, 28, a Harlem resident who found herself discussing the beating while at a conference on health care reform in New York City. "It reflects on how endemic violence is in our communities and shows that it's acceptable in some people's minds to stand there and not do anything to intervene."

When the topic arose on Joe Madison's XM satellite-syndicated Washington, D.C.-based talk show, The Black Eagle, callers spent hours venting and airing their emotions, Madison said. Some blamed school administrators, police and government officials who they say should have known about the tension at the school. But many lamented that the violence has gone on for too long.

"People can see for themselves the inhumanity, and we are just incensed," Madison said.

Man found shot to death

A 23-year-old Chicago man was found dead Sunday on the Near West Side with a gunshot wound to his head, police said. The man was identified as Demetrius Watson, of East Garfield Park, according to the Cook County medical examiner's office. Police were called to the 1300 block of West Washburne Avenue after they received a report of shots fired, according to Chicago Police Officer Robert Perez.

U. of I. heads back for future

Looking to move beyond a crippling admissions scandal, the University of Illinois board of trustees Saturday named Stanley Ikenberry as interim president, bringing back a nationally renowned educator who's no stranger to the job. Ikenberry, the university president from 1979 to 1995, said he's optimistic the U. of I.'s darkest days are behind it. He formally takes over Jan. 1 to temporarily oversee the university's three campuses in Urbana-Champaign, Chicago and Springfield.

Cop thrown from horse

A Chicago police mounted patrol officer was hurt when he was thrown from his horse Saturday afternoon while trying to write a parking ticket outside Grant Park on Columbus Drive. The officer landed on his elbow and head and was taken to Northwestern Memorial Hospital. The 47-year-old officer, who has been with Chicago police since 1994, suffered a slight cut to his head and needed stitches on his elbow, police said.

Cybersecurity starts at home—and the office

1 Typhoon devastation

Typhoon Parma caused widespread flooding and landslides in the Philippines, including the devastation seen here Sunday in Nabua. At least 16 people died when Parma hit Luzon on Saturday, though the capital, Manila—still awash in floodwaters from a storm a week earlier—was spared. AP

2 Iran cooperation?

The visiting head of the UN nuclear watchdog set Oct. 25 as the date for his inspectors to check Iran's newly revealed uranium enrichment site and struck an upbeat note Sunday, saying Tehran's confrontation with the West is easing.

3 Official found dead

A former Japanese finance minister who stepped down after appearing to be drunk at a news conference was found dead in his Tokyo home Sunday, police said, ruling out foul play.

Work woes

Former Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan predicted on Sunday that the jobless rate will pass 10 percent and stay there for a while, and a second stimulus plan is not needed now.

4 Wildfire rages

A wind-fanned wildfire that charred some 5 ½ square-miles of the San Gabriel Mountains in California continued to rage Sunday as firefighters worked to prevent flames from advancing toward the town of Wrightwood.

5 Tweet trouble

A self-described New York City anarchist has been accused of tweeting the location of police officers to protesters trying to evade them during the Group of 20 economic summit in Pittsburgh.

DIGIT

1 in 10

Nearly one in 10 of the world's babies is born premature, and about 1 million infants die each year as a result, according to a report released Sunday by the March of Dimes.

6 WASHINGTON When swine flu broke out, the government revved up a massive information campaign centered on three words: Wash your hands.

The Obama administration now wants to convey similarly clear and concise guidance about one of the biggest national security threats in your home and office—the computer.

Think before you click. Know who's on the other side of that instant message. What you say or do in cyberspace stays in cyberspace—for many to see, steal and use against you or your government.

The Internet, said former national intelligence director Michael McConnell, “is the soft underbelly” of the U.S. today. Speaking at a new cybersecurity exhibit at the International Spy Museum in Washington, McConnell said the Internet has “introduced a level of vulnerability that is unprecedented.”

The Pentagon's computer systems are probed 360 million times a day, and one prominent power company has acknowledged that its networks see up to 70,000 scans a day, according to cybersecurity expert James Lewis.

For the most part, those probes of government and critical infrastructure networks are benign. Many, said McConnell, are a nuisance and some are crimes. But the most dangerous are probes aimed at espionage or tampering with or destroying data.

The attackers could be terrorists aiming at the U.S. culture and economy, or nation-states looking to insert malicious computer code into the electrical grid that could be activated weeks or years from now.

PROTECT YOURSELF

Here are some ways to exercise caution online:

- » use antivirus software, spam filters, parental controls and firewalls.
- » regularly back up important files to external computer drives.
- » think twice before sending information over the Internet, particularly when using wireless or unsecured public networks.

8 U.S. troops killed in fierce Afghan fighting

7 KABUL Hundreds of insurgents armed with automatic rifles and rocket-propelled grenades stormed a pair of remote outposts near the Pakistan border, killing eight U.S. soldiers and capturing more than 20 Afghan security troops in the deadliest assault against U.S. forces in more than a year, military officials said Sunday.

The fierce gunbattle, which erupted at dawn Saturday in the Kamdesh district of mountainous Nuristan province and raged throughout the day, is likely to fuel the debate in Washington over the direction of the troubled eight-year war.

It was the heaviest U.S. loss of life in a single battle since July 2008, when nine American soldiers were killed in a raid on an outpost in Wanat in the same province.

Samoans still trying to cope

8 Jessie Lualemana, 6, sits Friday amidst the ruins of Matatula village on the tsunami-devastated coastline of American Samoa. On Sunday, mourning islanders held a national prayer service for victims of the tsunami. According to officials, at least 176 people were killed. GETTY IMAGES

MONDAY MOURNING | BY BAG BOY

‘D’? Oh, no. ‘O’? A-OK!

Matt Forte, glad to have you back. The Bears running game sure missed you. Not as much as they’re missing a reliable defense, though.

Be honest. You’re a bit worried the Bears let Detroit go nuts in the first half of Sunday’s game. I know I am. The Lions are a lot better than the winless team they were last year, but the Bears made them look even better.

Are we missing Brian Urlacher that much? If so, I’ve got to give the guy some credit. He may be surly, but he just might be the key to the D.

Back to the Lions. They had a hobbled running back. They had a rookie quarterback. They also had three scores in the first half. They were making it look easy and making me queasy.

Good thing we have a competent and fearless—or clueless?—quarterback. I guess that’s the reason to get a guy like Jay Cutler, right?

Why worry about a leaky defense when you have a high-powered offense?

When’s the last time you could say that, Bears fans? BAG BOY IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

SCOTT STRAZZANTE/TRIBUNE

Jay Cutler insisted he wasn't trying to imitate John Elway

when he spun like the blades on a helicopter as he flew across the goal line in the first quarter.

He popped up after that landing, and the Bears eventually took off, too. They weren't about to let a Lions win streak get off the ground.

Cutler threw two touchdown passes and ran for another, and the Bears pulled away in the second half to beat the Lions 48-24 on Sunday a week after Detroit snapped its 19-game slide.

His 5-yard dash early on sparked images of Elway's highlight reel run against Green Bay in the Super Bowl, yet Cutler dismissed the comparison to a legendary predecessor in Denver.

"If I could have just dove in there nice and quietly, I would have," Cutler said.

Instead, he had to earn it. So did the Bears.

Matt Forte ran for 121 yards, rookie Johnny Knox returned a kickoff 102 yards and the Bears headed into their bye with a third straight win.

With a chance to put together consecutive wins for the first time since 2007, the Lions hung in for a half before the Bears (3-1) pulled away.

"I guess we've got to get punched in the face a couple times to realize we're in a fight," defensive end Adewale Ogunleye said.

A punch in the face was how the second half felt to the Lions. Coach Jim Schwartz called it "one of the worst" he's seen.

Robbie Gould kicked two field goals, including a career-high 52-yarder in the third quarter, and Tommie Harris set up an early touchdown with his first career interception — and his first since "1982," he joked.

"We know how to finish a game. We need to start stronger and faster and all of that," coach Lovie Smith said. "But I'm proud of how the guys finished the game."

THREE BEARS

WHO'S HOT, NOT AND SOMEWHERE IN BETWEEN.

Too cold

Targeted by the Lions, Zack Bowman was burned on Detroit's first play for a 45-yard pass to Calvin Johnson, fooled on a reverse and flagged for a defensive-holding call on Johnson.

Too hot

No Bears player has a better impact-plays-per-touch ratio than Johnny Knox. His 102-yard kickoff return for a TD to start the second half provided momentum that changed the course of the game.

Just right

Matt Forte cracked the 100-yard barrier for the first time this season, boosted largely by the breakaway 61-yard run in the first quarter that loosened up the Lions' defense. On Forte's 37-yard TD run, he gave safety Louis Delmas a head-and-shoulders fake that answered anybody who had begun to doubt him.

Pink is the new yuck

Breast cancer awareness is a great cause, but the pink gear featured in NFL games this weekend assaulted the senses. Pink cleats: OK. Pink wristbands on black-and-white-clad refs: Not so much. Pink gloves on players: Atrocious.

Just leave the pink to the experts—like the cheerleaders.

instant replay

The good, the bad and the ugly this week in the NFL.

redeyesports@tribune.com

STUD OF THE WEEK Peyton Manning

Stop us if you've heard this one before: The Indianapolis quarterback threw for 353 yards and two touchdowns in the Colts' 34-17 trampling of Seattle, making him third all time with 342 scoring passes. Not all of them were in this game.

DUD OF THE WEEK Willis McGahee

Baltimore's running back has had more comebacks than Michael Jordan, but he ran into a brick wall in a loss at New England. He led the NFL in touchdowns entering the game but finished with just 11 yards.

THUD OF THE WEEK Eli Manning

The younger Manning left Sunday's win against Kansas City with a heel injury. A heel? Maybe he should be the one wearing pink.

1 Jay Cutler can do it all as a quarterback, but ...	... he still has a long way to go to be as good as Elliott is at Dungeons & Dragons.	... he can't make a good cup of coffee. Deal-breaker.	... Beyonce had one of the best videos of all time!	... the Bears' messiah can't heal the defense if it goes lame.	... he's not Superman. Let's leave the touchdown running to Matt Forte, OK?
2 How concerned are you about the Bears defense?	About as concerned as I am about Mayor Daley's defense for his latest mega-failure.	Not all that concerned. Now the Steelers defense? Whole 'nother story.	Maybe a tip from my friend on the North Side will help: Try to hop when you make a play on defense.	As long as they make like a bakery and keep producing turnovers, they'll be fine.	Not as concerned as I am about how I'm going to spend next Sunday's bye without the Bears.
3 Adewale Ogunleye is to the Bears as ...	... the heart is to the human body. OK, maybe a little overboard, but he's a fellow Hoosier. Go Wale!	... a big guard dog is to a fenced-in yard—important and something you don't mess with.	... Tracy Swartz is to RedEye. Both blog and are good at tackling men.	... his blog is to chicagonow.com , a nice addition.	... any player in a contract year is to their team. Cynical, yes, but that's just me.
4 How relieved are you that Erin Andrews' stalker has apparently been apprehended?	I was sure it was Bag Boy, so I'm relieved he's still with us. The whole bag thing's a bit creepy, though.	Pretty relieved, but got me thinking that someone could be watching me while I'm naked.	Thankfully Mayor Daley had nothing to worry about in his hotel room in Copenhagen.	Um, other than the vote. Uh yeah, that's the guy! (Now where did I leave my drill?)	It's great for her, but where will I get my photos now for my shrine to Erin?
5 What would be a good use for all those worthless "We back the bid" banners?	Recycle them and use them to print subpoenas for the next City Hall scandal.	Tie them all together and prevent Blagojevich from leaving his house to be on TV again.	Pothole fillers.	I'd say send them to the city recycling center, but we all know what really happens there.	Wrap up all the city's underachieving baseball players and ship them somewhere, anywhere.

Andrews grateful after arrest

WESTMONT The man accused of stalking ESPN reporter Erin Andrews kept his yard manicured, played golf and enjoyed cooking on a gas grill on a patio behind his $300,000 suburban Chicago townhouse.

It's the apparently normal life of Michael David Barrett, a 47-year-old insurance company employee, that made his arrest for allegedly secretly videotaping Andrews nude so upsetting, his neighbors said Sunday.

"I'm totally shocked," said David Wayne, 72, a retired corporate executive who lives several doors down from Barrett. "He looked absolutely normal—nothing distinguishing."

Barrett was being held in jail after his arrest Friday at O'Hare. Investigators believe he recorded Andrews by aiming a cell phone camera through an altered peephole in the door of her hotel room.

Andrews, 31, worked the Auburn-Tennessee game for ESPN on Saturday night in Knoxville, Tenn.

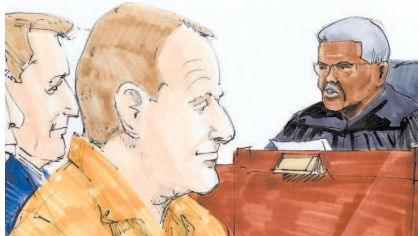

She issued a statement after the arrest thanking FBI agents and federal prosecutors for their work.

"I hope that today's action will help the countless others who have been similarly victimized," said Andrews in the statement. "I will make every effort to strengthen the laws on a state and federal level to better protect victims of criminal stalking. I am also grateful to those who have expressed their concerns and good wishes for my family and me."

An FBI affidavit said Barrett specifically asked for a room next to Andrews at a Tennessee hotel where seven videos were likely taken, apparently through an altered peephole. An eighth video may have been shot at a Milwaukee hotel.

Barrett is accused of trying to sell videos of Andrews to celebrity Web site tmz.com and posting them online.

Several TV networks and newspapers had aired clips or printed screen grabs from the videos of Andrews in July. She has covered hockey, college football, college basketball and Major League Baseball for ESPN since 2004 and was named "sexiest sportscaster" by Playboy magazine in 2008 and 2009.

How 'bout them apples!

Lusting after fall? Try these daytrippin' dates

By Metromix staff

No need to hide it. We know you're aching for a farm-centric roll in the hayfield with your significant other this fall. Grab your date, hop in the car and head to these three spots to fulfill your pumpkin-picking, apple-sampling, corn maze-mapping craving for the year.

County Line Orchard

200 S. County Line Rd., Hobart, Ind. 219-947-4477

Date appeal: Kicking off your first day-long date

The details: Yes, those mom-and-pop operations are quaint, but if you're looking for an apple orchard/pumpkin patch with a bit more polish, you'll find it just over the Indiana boarder. Stay entertained with two live bands on weekends, tractor-pulled wagon rides, a corn maze and a tchotchke-packed gift shop. Oh, it's got apples ($1.65 a pound) and pumpkins (40 cents a pound) too. Plenty of them. Get a list of what's in season upon your arrival and hop a wagon to the orchards and patch. The rest is up to you. And never mind that you're going to spend the next two weeks turning your two 5-pound bags of apples into pies, crisps and tarts. You'd be foolish not to make a stop at the orchard's cafe, which — surprise, surprise — specializes in taffy apples, apple doughnuts, apple pie and apple cider.

Keep the date going: at Three Floyds Brewpub (9750 Indiana Parkway, Munster, Ind.). This brew pub and its excellent beer list will be a welcomed break from anything resembling an apple.

Goebbert's Farm

40 W. Higgins Rd., South Barrington, Ill. 847-428-6727

Date appeal: Cozying up on a bumpy wagon ride

The details: Watch your mouth here, sailor—the crowd at this northwest suburban farm is mainly families, with a handful of no-kids couples to help keep the balance. Admission's free to browse pumpkins of all sizes and nosh on fall treats such as sugar-coated cider doughnuts (75 cents), roasted corn ($2.75) and pulled pork sandwiches ($4.50), all best washed down with hot apple cider (if you happen to have a flask of rum on you, we won't tell). Work the farm-fun factor with goofy photo ops for couples such as a pair of giant rocking chairs and a stand-up of "American Gothic" with the faces cut out. Skip the $7 tickets to Animal Land (besides periodic pig races, it's all kiddie stuff). Instead, plunk down $4 for a tractor-pulled wagon ride that winds through a cornfield and a haunted barn peppered with amusing nods for grown-up riders—note the rotting farmer corpse with a beer bottle sticking out of his pants—with bonus views of gag-inducingly huge mansions just off the farm's property.

Keep the date going: at the Onion Pub & Brewery (22221 Pepper Rd., Lake Barrington, Ill.). Sip on pints of Oktoberfest, Pumpkin Spice Ale or the rich Jack Stout (all $4.50) in the old-fashioned, wood-bedecked bar.

Keller's Farmstand

2500 Johnson Rd., Oswego, Ill. 630-554-1325

Date appeal: Getting lost together in a maze

The details: There's no such thing as too much corn in farm-lovin' Oswego. So carving a 14-acre maze from towering feed-corn stalks only made sense for the Kellers, who started creating this weekend labyrinth nine years ago. Shaped using a man-powered super-mower, a GPS and an aerial design depicting circus scenes (2008), a safari (2009) and many others, the maze's twists are tough to navigate even with the help of the map that's included in your $8 admission. Enter your gumshoe date. Take turns finding the 14 checkpoints or race each other around the maze's outer edge. After, refuel with a slice of Rosati's pizza ($3) before taking a free wagon ride to the 30-acre pumpkin patch to choose a prospective jack-o'-lantern (45 cents per pound up to $10). On your way out, stock up on locally made jams and, you guessed it, sweet corn on the cob (35 cents an ear, $3.99 per dozen).

Keep the date going: at Fox Valley Winery (5600 Route 34, Oswego, Ill.) Get three complimentary samples (additional are $5 for four) and cozy up by the fireplace with a bottle and cheese.

Hair we go again

Modern takes on '80s-hair styles are popping up everywhere

Los Angeles Times

Poufed, permed or punctuated with pink and purple spikes, the hair styles of the 1980s exemplified the decade of excess.

"It was all about big and extreme," says Snooky Bellomo, who with her sister Tish owns the Manic Panic stores that recently outfitted the movie "Whip It!"

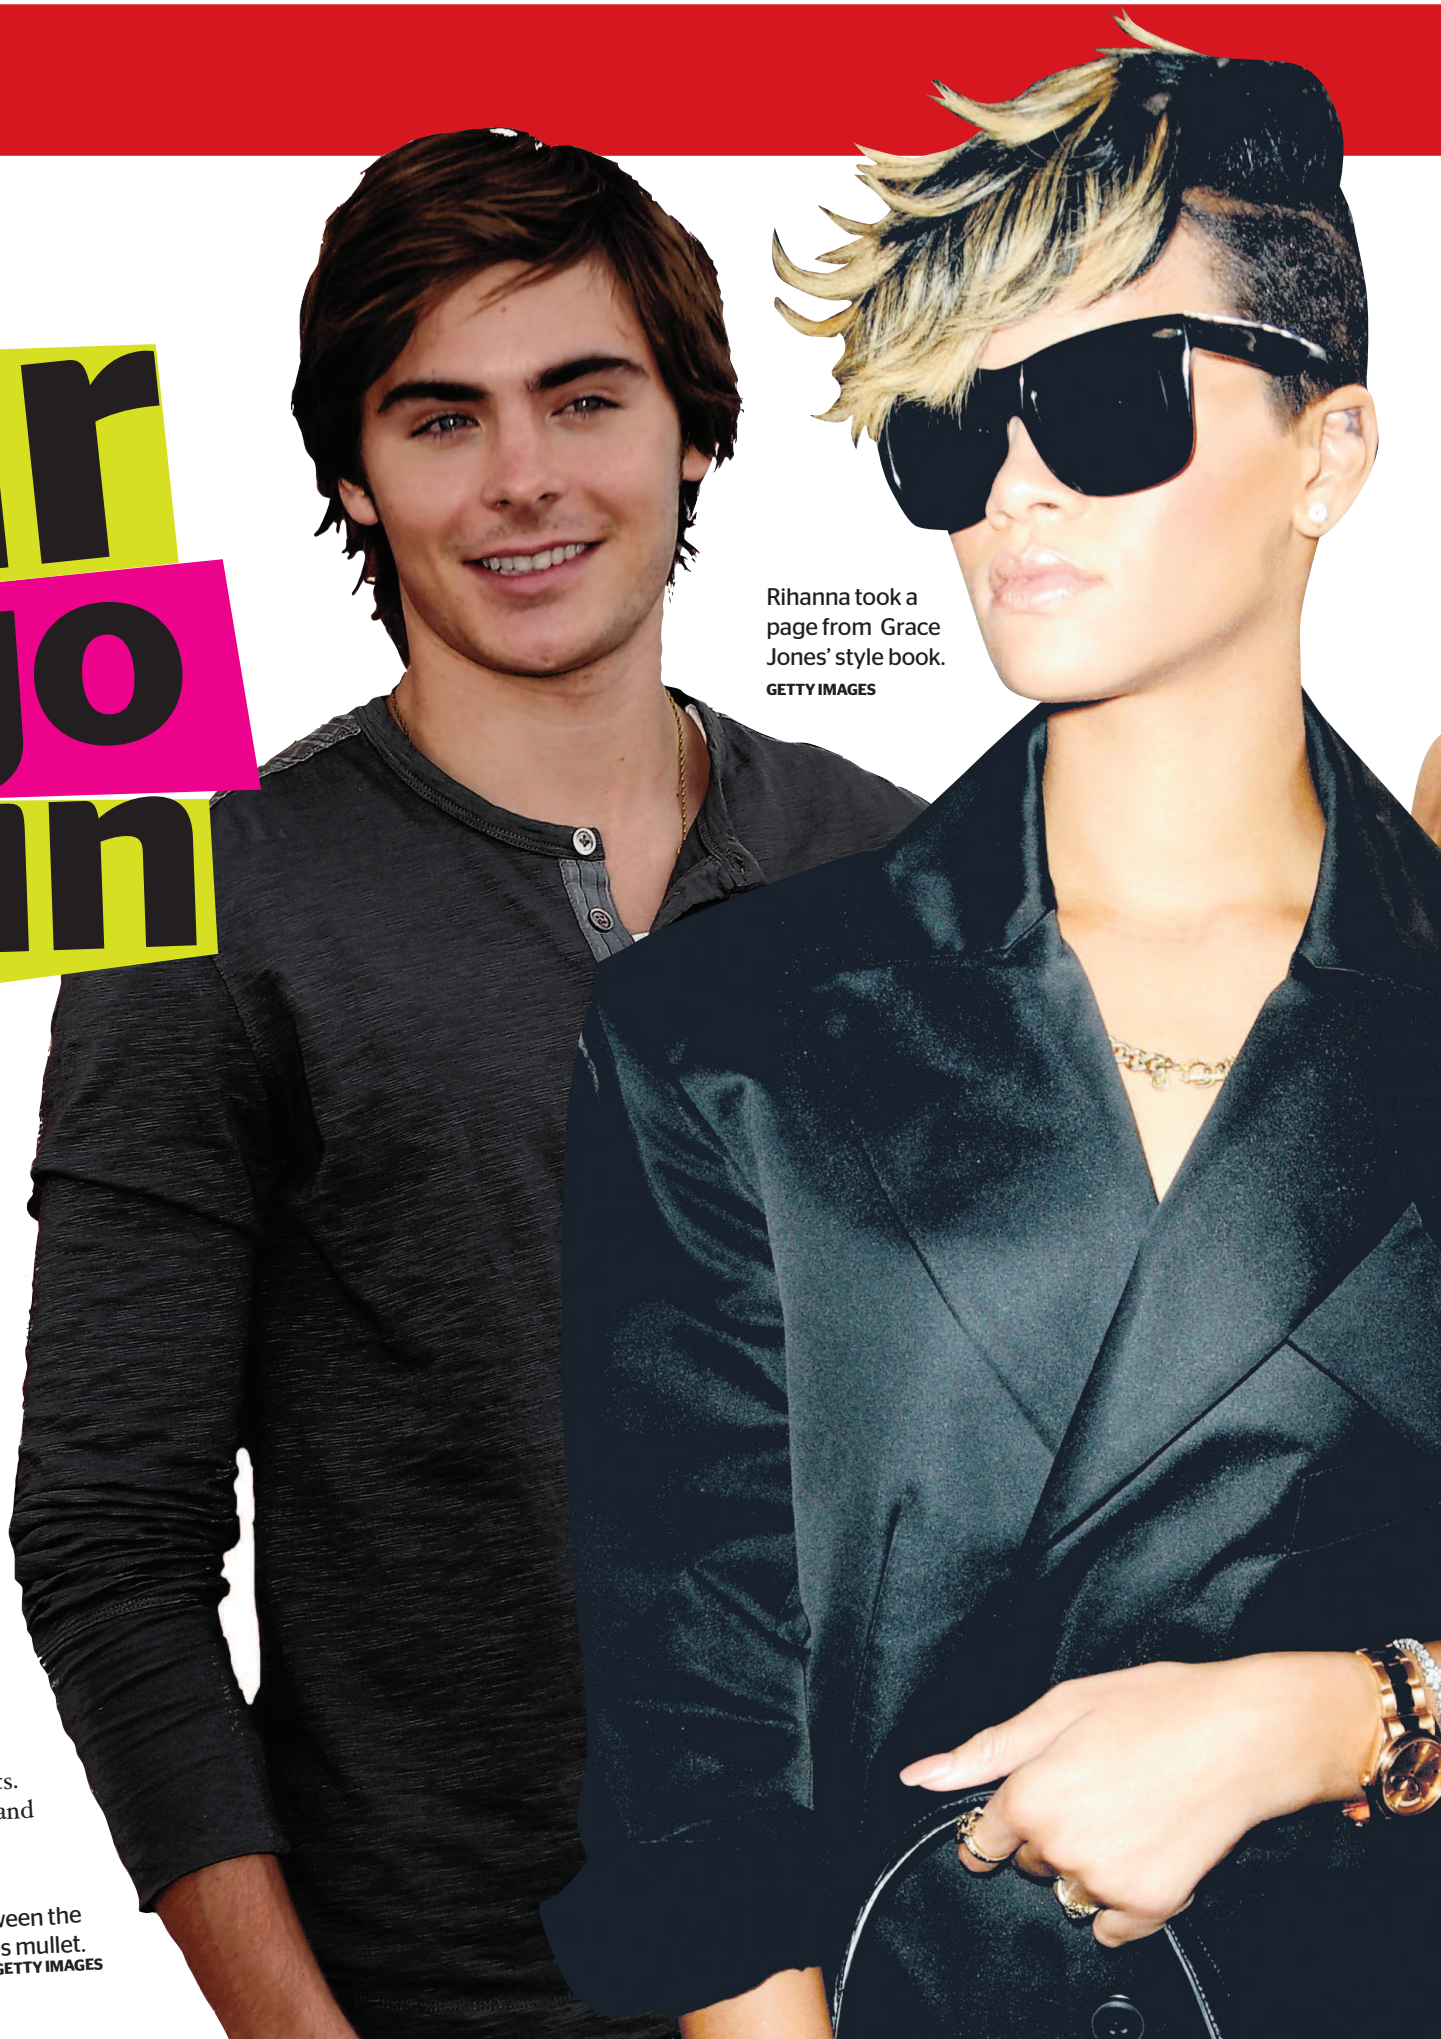

Now, with miniskirts, leggings and neon fabrics once again wardrobe staples, ready your Aqua Net: Teases, crimps and other stiff coifs are rising up like "Thriller" zombies.

You won't see reinterpretations of the decade's ubiquitous and unisex perms or Michael Jackson-esque Jheri curls — today's style savants don't want anything so "rigid," says Redken creative consultant Guido, who styled Marc Jacobs' fall 2009 neon runway show.

But many other '80s 'dos are no longer don'ts. Here's a look at some of the vintage hair styles and modern interpretations.

Zac Efron's hair is a mix between the Beatles' '60s mop top and an '80s mullet.

THE MULLET

Although this, um, business-casual style evolved from cuts of the previous decade, fans and members of groups like Guns N' Roses and Quiet Riot ensured the metal mullet's place as a sub-category of what Linda Wells, Allure magazine's editor in chief, calls "one of the more memorable and regrettable hairstyles" of the '80s.

Alli Denning, who owns LikeTotally80s.com, says the mullet was the boy-band look of the '80s. Zac Efron's hair, which is "long in the front but creeps down in the back" is a mix between the Beatles' '60s mop top and an '80s mullet, she maintains.

THE MOHAWK

If you wanted the fun of volume and hair product but without a perm's priss, there was the side-shaved, spiked-on-top mohawk. You could make it interesting with some purple or red. Or maybe a nice leopard print. "Some people even did the faux hawk," says Manic Panic's Tish Bellomo. Slicked back and up, the style "looks cute, but it's not very daring," she says.

Allure's Wells says the modern Mohawk twists seen at runway shows previewing 2009 fall fashion were done with "high teased pieces in the middle and then tight on the sides. They give you that Mohawk look without any razors being involved."

"CLOSER TO GOD" BANGS

Denning, who gave these sculpted round bangs their nickname on her Web site, considers this "the defining '80s hairstyle," saying the goal was to get bangs as "big and as far away from your scalp as possible."

"It even transcended genders," Denning adds. "On the one hand, you had the Wilson sisters from Heart who had humongous hair, and then you have the hair bands (Poison, Def Leppard) and you have men with that hairdo."

Today, Wells looks to Reese Witherspoon's bangs, where volume is focused on the side of her face.

THE DEBBIE GIBSON

The Bellomos say some considered the sprouting, high-side ponytail to be a punk rock look, but they insist that you'd have never found one at CBGB. Socialite Savannah Miller tried it out last spring, but Denning says that in today's incarnation, you'll more often see a side pony closer to the neck and pulled near one ear.

Bret Michaels
of Poison

Grace Jones

Brian Setzer

THE FADE

Shorn around the sides and high on the head, the fade got its 1980s sensibility from black artists such as Grace Jones. And the later in the decade, the higher the hair, says Erica Blevins, who owns the Oh! My Nappy Hair salon chain with her mother, Rosario Schuler. Shaved sides popped back up this summer, with Rihanna, Cassie and others showing a bit of scalp.

ASYMMETRICAL NEW-WAVE BOBS

Wells says this 'do featured hair "shaved close to the head on one side, and the other side was a traditional bob. It was a totally acceptable buttoned-up hair style on one side and then destroying it and being really punk on the other."

Look to Victoria Beckham or Mary J. Blige for today's version. Wells says you have to be daring for this cut because "they become cartoonish in a matter of seconds."

POMPADOURS

"It was much more a man's thing in the '80s than it was a woman's," Wells says of the front-end head fluff.

This season's runway shows for women's fall fashion had several sky-high pompadours. Wells says, "if it's in a French twist or chignon or even a ponytail, then it can look good" in everyday life.

CRIMPED HAIR

Created by sleeping on wet braids or spending hours with a ridged iron, this look heated up in the '70s and made waves by the '80s. For non-believers who've traded crimpers for straightening irons, take a look at Prada's models sporting frizzy-crimped hair in fall advertisements.

FINGER WAVES

They are a classic memorialized by black-and-white screen sirens. With '80s adaptations, "you might have a high top with finger waves in the front. You might even have the asymmetrical thing going on and the front being the finger wave. Prince even had finger waves," says salon owner Erica Blevins.

For today's softer, more relaxed versions, see the accidentally-on-purpose styles models wore at Proenza Schouler's spring 2009 runway show.

"The thing about finger waves is if you do them softly and loosely, they're staples," Guido says. "Jeans are never going to go away, the white shirt isn't going to go away." Neither, apparently, will finger waves.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY LIBRA

Sept. 23 to Oct. 23

Mercury is increasing the pace of communications. You could find yourself juggling multiple dates while sending e-mails, fielding phone calls and responding to text messages. Don't let your brain get too fried from over-activity.

Scorpio

Oct. 24-Nov. 21

You could develop a sudden emotional bond with someone, and this person might be living far away from you. Distance means nothing on a spiritual level. You might have fun exploring a cross country passion with a special friend.

Sagittarius

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Be patient with your honey. So he forgot to walk the dog, and your puppy left a mess in your kitchen. So she neglected to inform you that she would be late, leaving you to stew for an hour at a restaurant. The moon is reminding you that you're not perfect, either.

Capricorn

Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Although you think you know where a romance is headed, Mars says make sure. You could have troubles reading between the lines. Your signals are a little crossed. Don't assume one thing is happening when the complete opposite is true.

Aquarius

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

You might have a chance to take a trip thanks to Mercury. Even if you just get away for one day, a change of scene will do you good. You could enjoy some heated flirtations as you hang out in a fabulous new setting.

Pisces

Feb. 19-March 20

If your sex life seems like hard work, blame cranky Venus. You and your partner could be distracted with work or other obligations. Don't force intimacy if you're simply not in the mood. Try a little cuddling or casually make out during a movie.

Aries

March 21-April 19

As a Fire sign, you usually dominate the bedroom and demand that your lover become your willing slave. But wimpy

Mars is making you a lot more passive. Suddenly, you want your honey to tie you up instead of doing all the hard work yourself.

Taurus

April 20-May 20

You'll find it easy to turn your partner on, thanks to sexy Venus. You'll finally figure out the exact move that turns your girlfriend to jelly. Or you'll stumble upon a winning technique that will leave your boyfriend begging you for more.

Gemini

May 21-June 21

You don't have much patience with losers, and the moon is making it clear that you need to let someone go. Maybe you've been on again, off again with a former flame. If this person doesn't bring you positive energy, it's time to ditch him or her.

Cancer

June 22-July 22

As a Water sign, it's easier for you to just go with the flow and let your partner take charge. But Mars is reminding you that a relationship requires input from two people, not one. Stand up for yourself and express your true desires.

Leo

July 23-Aug. 22

The last few months have been tricky. You've discovered things about life and love that you wish you'd never known. Your boyfriend is a cross dresser or your lady love is a secret Jonas Brothers fan. Jupiter says try to conceal your disgust.

Virgo

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You've been in business mode lately, but Venus soon will remind you that there are many tasty fish still swimming in the sea. You could develop a crush on a neighbor or coworker. Or somebody gorgeous might hit you up for your number at a party.

“There’s a new book out called ‘Why Women Have Sex’ that says there are 237 reasons why women have sex. And folks, Letterman knows the top 10.”

Jimmy Fallon
Late Night

Letterman
AP

JOKES ON HIM

Associated Press

David Letterman has had a tough week.

On Thursday, the “Late Show” host acknowledged having sex with some of the women who worked for him, and told his viewers he was the victim of a blackmail attempt.

Since then, more details have emerged, including the name of the man, Robert J. “Joe” Halderman, a producer for CBS’ “48 Hours,” who was charged Friday with trying to blackmail Letterman for $2 million.

Letterman’s fellow late-night comedians didn’t spare the host over the weekend, with several of them making Letterman the punchline. Jimmy Kimmel was the only one to completely avoid the issue. Here’s a look at what was said.

“No comment”

Conan O’Brien The Tonight Show

Letterman’s prime rival didn’t willingly address the issue but couldn’t avoid it when guest Drew Carey brought it up. “I would hate to be on opposite Letterman tonight with all that sex stuff going on,” Carey said. “That’s got to be tough.” “No comment,” O’Brien awkwardly replied. NBC FILE PHOTO

ROUND 2?

Still to be heard from: Jon Stewart on “The Daily Show” and Stephen Colbert on “The Colbert Report.” Both Comedy Central shows are dark on Fridays, but will be back with fresh episodes Monday.

So will CBS’ Craig Ferguson, host of “The Late Late Show,” whose

“If you came here tonight for sex with a talk show host, you’ve got the wrong studio.”

Jay Leno The Jay Leno Show

The 9 p.m. host began his monologue with the stinging: “If you came here tonight for sex with a talk show host, you’ve got the wrong studio.” He continued, “The guy that was trying to blackmail Letterman was a producer for the show ‘48 Hours.’ It could have been worse: At least he wasn’t producer of ‘To Catch a Predator.’” AP FILE PHOTO

Seth Meyers Saturday Night Live

The “Weekend Update” anchor dubbed the extortion attempt by a CBS News producer “a stupid human trick.” Meyers added that the would-be blackmailer was threatening to reveal embarrassing details of Letterman’s personal life, for example: “After sex, he would always say, ‘Stay tuned for Craig Ferguson.’” NBC PHOTO

Friday edition had been taped earlier in the week. On Monday, the comically outspoken Ferguson will be able to add his zingers. But there’s a potentially delicate situation: Letterman’s Worldwide Pants produces his show. That makes Letterman his boss. AP

Fockers coming to the Windy City

We might not be greeting athletes from around the world in 2016, but this week, if you're lucky, you might just meet a Focker in Chicago.

Some of the stars of the third installment of "Meet the Parents" are scheduled to film "Little Fockers" this week in the city. Blythe Danner and director Paul Weitz arrived over the weekend and checked into their downtown hotels. Set sources confirm that Robert De Niro, Ben Stiller and Teri Polo will be here this week filming as well. Newbie Jessica Alba is listed on imdb.com as part of the cast, but no one can confirm filming dates for her in the Windy City.

The film is about the arrival of a junior Focker. The families brace themselves for the arrival of a baby, according to imdb.com. Word has it they'll start filming Monday in the Lincoln Park area. So keep your eyes peeled!

Olympic opinion

I hung out with Olympic and Red Bull athlete Lindsey Vonn at the Cubs game on the eve of the big disappointing Olympic announcement. Vonn—who was promoting Vail Resorts—weighed in on Chicago hosting the Olympics. "I think the benefit of having the Olympics in Chicago is the atmosphere," Vonn told me. "I know as an athlete the experience is so much better if the city supports it, and Chicago is a perfect candidate." Well, so much for that.

Vonn, who hails from Minnesota, says she is charging ahead. "The Vancouver Olympics are my biggest goal right now ... I'll probably ski through 2014." After that, Vonn said, she may think about having kids with her husband, Thomas Vonn, her coach.

JON & KATE PLUS A BANK ACCOUNT DEBATE

The latest rumor in the ongoing war between Jon and Kate Gosselin?

He drained her bank account, leaving the mother of eight children with $1,000, according to radaronline.com. A rep for the estranged husband had no comment when contacted by People magazine. The mag cited an unnamed source as confirming the details and saying Kate Gosselin would take legal action.

She's scheduled to speak Monday on NBC's "Today" show about her husband's "recent actions," according to a posting on the show's Web site over the weekend.

Stefani's party

"Lordy, Lordy: Gwen Stefani's 40!" While we can't say with certainty those words weren't uttered at the pop star's birthday party over the weekend, we do know this: People magazine reports the shindig took place at a West Hollywood restaurant, Stefani was surrounded by family and friends, and—according to reports—Kate Beckinsale and her husband were there. Fun!

Tarantino

Kill Bill—again

Quentin Tarantino says he wants to do another "Kill Bill" movie, but you'll have to wait for it. A release date of 2014 would be likely for the film, according to Variety, giving the characters a peaceful break before the next bloody installment in the series. Tarantino made the announcement over the weekend at the Morelia International Film Festival in Mexico.

'Housewives' death

The former fiance of a cast member from "The Real Housewives of Atlanta" died Friday night after a fight outside an Atlanta strip club, The Associated Press reports. Ashley "A.J." Jewell died from massive head injuries after the fight in the parking lot of the Body Tap Club. Jewell was engaged to "Housewives" cast member Kandi Burruss until August.

Bad publicity? Hardly

Some good news for David Letterman: The blackmail scandal is boosting his ratings.

On Thursday, numbers for "Late Show With David Letterman" surged 22 percent based on preliminary estimates, according to the Nielsen Company. Letterman spent part of the program discussing a recent $2 million blackmail attempt and admitted that he had had affairs with female staffers on his show, The Associated Press reported.
